Who Loves Peter Pan

Peter can't spell, but he knows how to fly.
And he knows Wendy well so he never asks why
She wants him to teach her, but she just won't understand,
That it's easy to fly
But he needs help to land...so

Fly Peter, rise, high over this town.
When will you land on solid ground?

Peter suspects that it hurts to be a man
'Cause, if he finds love, his heart will be laid bare.
And a boy's heart is tender, more than a girl could know...
And if it gets wounded, he may forget how to crow...so

Crow, Peter Pan... strong and loud...
Crow, Peter Pan...crow so proud...
Crow, Peter Pan...crow with joy...
Crow, Peter Pan...you're for ever a boy.

Wendy knows Peter cries in his sleep
And she'll hold him and rock him,
But she doesn't know how to weep.
She's just a girl... she could never be his mother.
She's just a girl... she doesn't know how to be his lover.
And since she's a girl, she can only pretend to be strong enough to love Peter Pan.

So, who's brave enough to love this man?
Who's soft enough to be a safe place to land?

So who can help Peter Pan?
Who knows how to love him?
Who's strong enough, and weak enough,
To be below, beside and above him?
Who loves well enough to provide the breast
Where he can lay his head to finally get his rest?

Peter suspects that he'd have dues to pay...
With no more adventures, he'd have to work all day.
We must never see him caught inside this trap
So we can still believe that he always will come back.

So... fly Peter, rise, high over this town

We're waiting here on your solid ground.

chorus

Who is free enough to delight in his crow?

Who knows well enough how to lose a shadow?
